Georgia Tech Campus Reservation System modifies process for notification of Academic Bumped events

On occasion, events scheduled in classrooms may need to be bumped out of the classroom in lieu of an academic class needing the space.

In the past the events were automatically given a status of "academic bumped" and the process of notifying the customer was unreliable.

Due to your feedback surrounding the "academic bumped" notification, we are improving the process by automating the notification through the campus reservation system for event customers in classrooms. The classrooms will no longer appear double booked. Instead, the event will be canceled if an academic class needs the classroom. Event customers will receive an email with the following subject: Your reservation for (date) has been CANCELED due to academic class needs. Please locate another room using GTEvents. 07/25/18

Georgia Tech Campus Reservation System clarifies status on instantly available spaces

Users who reserve spaces that are instantly available using the Georgia Tech Campus Reservation System (GT Events) will now see a new status on their confirmation email. The new status for these spaces is "Reservation Confirmed - Web". The intent of this new status verbiage is to be clear in relaying that the reservation request is CONFIRMED and no further action is required. 06/21/18

Georgia Tech Campus Reservation System adds ability to start a reservation from the browse feature

Georgia Tech Campus Reservation System (GT Events) users are now able to start the reservation process from the BROWSE LOCATIONS page.

When browsing by locations for room availability, users are able to click on any room's free space (in hour increments) from the calendar grid and start a new reservation. This eliminates the need of having to leave the location browse in order to select the correct reservation template to start the reservation process.

After clicking on a room's free space, the correct reservation template is automatically selected and populated with the selected room, date and times. 06/21/18
